11th November 2007. I've recently read " Englishness and Empire: 1939-1965 " (Oxford University Press, 2005), in which the author, Wendy Webster, describes how the way the British Empire was portrayed (in the press and films) changed during and after the Second World War. During the war, 'heroic' narratives of empire, as a story of British power and conquest, were superseded by a story of a multi-racial community of (more or less) equal nations, loyal to Britain as the 'mother country' and ...
