Visible light communication (VLC) is the use of visible light as a method of wirelessly transmitting data. VLC is an affordable method of transmitting data at light speed. The light used in VLC is between 780-375 nanometers. The majority of modern VLC implementations are digital, but early uses included pre-radio transmission of sound by modulated sunlight in the photophone invented

Two Pendulums, One Heavy, and One Light. A pendulum is simply something heavy tied onto the end of a long string. It can swing freely from side to side. There are some particularities about just how a pendulum swings though. Take a look at the situation below. Two pendulums have been hung, each on strings about the same length.

Small Orb Light Flashes: There are indeed colors that do radiate outwards from a Spirit. Each Color represents the color of the Chakra, and each Chakra can emit a flash of color directly out of the very center of it's whirling vortex. It is a strong energy, and can display this quickly which is why it flashes.
